Anna,

This is an example of one of the many, many things your Mom did to get a good laugh. She was "the life of the party" all the time!! Your Mom dressed up as Superman and sang this song that she wrote to our Vice-Principal.

There are a lot of "inside jokes" in these lyrics that you may not understand, but there will ALWAYS be people around who loved your Mom and would be so happy to share these (and many other) stories with you.

Anna, I baby-sat you and I was always amazed how much your mother loved and cared for you. She was a "Supermom" in every way!!

♡ Nancy Donovan

---

song to the tune of

"Superman's Song" by The Crash Test Dummies

Brian wasn't a superman
He'd just come along putting out cones
For all the morning cars, quick as a kid in the playground
Brian Toner, now there was a real gent
He would not be caught sittin' around in no office with Sharry R, doing nothing

Chorus:
Brian Toner never made extra money
Doing book order while running from Debbie
And sometimes we despair
Our school will never see another guy like him

Hey Mike, he did a good job
Even though he could have scared any teacher
In our two buildings, he was too kind, so he would not Folks said he was a good head
Leading social stuff, running with the kids or simply hiding from all of our crazy requests

Chorus:
Brian Toner never made extra money
Writing staff minutes that tried to be funny
And sometimes we despair
Our school will never see another man like him

Brian king of the playground or Lord over all us staff
For he could hardly string together four words: "I Brian, VP."

Sometimes when he was stopping fights
I'll bet that he was tempted to just quit and turn his back
On us, join all his buds for a Tim's
But he stayed in the meetings, changing class lists
In dirty old classrooms till his work was through
And nothing to do but go on home

Chorus:
Brian Toner never made extra money
Tutoring Carol Young, his French honey
And sometimes we despair
Our school will never see another guy like him

But sometimes I despair
Our school might see another man like him hmmmmmmmmmmmm

Paula (Superman) with Brian Toner (VP)